

November 7, 2012

The Wolf School Newsletter

Wolf News

Cross Country Team On the Trail!

Seventh and eighth graders on The Wolf School's Cross Country team had a memorable run on the East Providence Bike Trail during a recent practice. "Halfway through the run we stopped to take in the landscape," explains coach Michael Rose. "We saw three white tail deer in the woods along the shore and two huge swans. Then on the way back to the bus the kids had a perfect view of the Providence skyline at dusk."

A few Cross Country team members at the beginning of the EP Bike Trail.

After school sports at Wolf is an important opportunity for our middle schoolers that impacts much more than physical fitness. According to Coach Rose, "Participating on an athletic team builds confidence,

Quick Links

The Wolf School

Admissions

Donate Now!

Like Us On Facebook!

social skills and a sense of camaraderie that many of our students have never experienced. They overcome a lot of anxiety and support each other along the way. Seeing them grow together as a team through hard work and shared experiences is pretty amazing! It makes me feel proud of our students and the work we all do everyday."

For more photos of the Cross Country Team check out our Facebook page here.

Local Educators Learn The Wolf Way

Helping teachers in regular classroom settings identify and work with complex learners was the goal of a recent training by Wolf School staff at Highlander Institute's Diverse Learners conference last Saturday.

Presented by Wolf's expert team, participants looked at characteristics of the complex learner through the lens of language processing, occupational therapy, academic and social/emotional factors.

According to Jessica Robins Miller, Head of School, "If educators can identify children early on and utilize practical strategies to support learning in the classroom, it can make a huge difference in establishing a positive school experience for the complex learner."

The training reviewed a range of contributing factors that can create learning interferences and provided concrete tips and practical solutions for teachers to implement in class. Click here for the full presentation.

Rosaline Granoff, Director of Admissions at Wolf, presenting at the Diverse Learners conference.

If you are interested in future trainings, or would like to have Wolf staff make a presentation to your group, contact Jessica Robins Miller at 401-432-9940 or jrmiller@thewolfschool.org.

You've Made a Difference!!

Thank you to all our 2011-2012 donors for their unwavering support.

Click here to see a list of our dedicated champions!

The Wolf School E-news hopes to keep you updated on our latest news, learnings and activities throughout the year.

Feel free to forward this email to friends, family, colleagues or anyone else you think might be interested in our unique educational programs for complex learners.

We hope you enjoy hearing from us, but if you would like to unsubscribe to this e-news at anytime, just click below or email Marie Esposito, Director of Institutional Advancement.

Our Mission

The Wolf School is dedicated to providing an educational environment where children with learning differences become successful, secure learners. Our intensive and integrated model enables children to discover and utilize their strengths and talents by meeting their academic, social and emotional needs.